

Part A -Email & Etiquette

Email 1:

To professor → ask for extension

Dear Professor,

I hope you are doing well. I am writing to kindly request an extension for the assignment submission scheduled for this week. Due to some unexpected circumstances, I have not been able to complete the work to the best of my ability within the given time.

I sincerely apologize for any inconvenience caused. I am putting in my best effort to complete the assignment properly and would really appreciate it if you could grant me a short extension of a few days.

Thank you for your understanding and support.

Yours sincerely,
Girik Balhotra

Email 2:

To company → internship request

Dear Sir/Madam,

I hope this message finds you well. My name is Girik Balhotra, and I am currently a student at VIT Bhopal. I am writing to express my interest in applying for an internship opportunity at your esteemed organization.

I am eager to gain practical experience and enhance my skills in a professional environment. I am particularly interested in learning and contributing to real-world projects. I am a quick learner, hardworking, and highly motivated to grow in my field.

I would be grateful if you could consider my application for any available internship position. I am happy to provide my resume and any additional information if required.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Yours sincerely,
Girik Balhotra

Report

Example of Poor Digital Communication and Its Resolution

In a recent scenario, a student emailed their professor in a rushed and informal manner, using slang and unclear language to request an extension on an assignment. The email lacked a proper greeting, clear explanation, and polite tone. As a result, the professor was confused about the request and felt the student was not serious, which led to the extension being denied.

What should have been done differently is to write a clear, respectful, and well-structured email. The student should have started with a proper greeting, explained the reason for the request briefly but clearly, and politely asked for an extension. Using a professional tone shows respect and helps the recipient understand the situation better. Good digital communication builds trust and increases the chances of a positive response.
